Good Life Tampa Bay* Attends the First Good Life Experience Event

Good Life Tampa Bay TV Show was there to kick off the first of three charitable Good Life Experience Events, hosted by Winky Wright, former boxing world champion, and Sean “P. Diddy” Combs.

February 1, 2010, St. Petersburg, Florida – Despite heavy rains, “The Good Life Experience” Super Bowl Party launched without dampened spirits for Super Bowl week 2009. Event co-hosts Winky Wright and Sean P. Diddy Combs turned The Venue entertainment complex into party central for star celebrities and athletes. ***Good Life Tampa Bay***, Tampa Bay’s premier lifestyle show that reports on local flavor from the fast-growing Tampa Bay market, was there to kick off the festivities.

“Good life to me means being able to take care of your family and friends. Being healthy. What the Winky Wright Foundation is about teaching people how to live a healthier lifestyle and, you know, enjoying it,” Winky Wright said.

“It’s important that we set the party off, that we set the energy off the right way. Everybody’s talking about the recession, the recession, the recession. Even the recession deserves a break, okay. So for the weekend here in Tampa we’re going to take a break from the recession and we are going to enjoy ourselves,” Sean Combs.

Among those stopping by for the party, NFL great Deion Sanders, Ravens quarterback Joe Flacco, former Buccaneer Chidi Ahanotu, Bengals receiver Chad “Ocho Cinco” Johnson, Cowboys tight end Jason Witten, Dolphins running back Ronnie Brown, Bucs receiver Michael Clayton, American Idol winner Jordin Sparks, American Idol finalist Chris Richardson, and Miss Africa USA Nyasha Zimucha.

Though the red carpet turned into a wet carpet, the media and celebrities managed to make the best of the cold and wet weather and work through interviews and photos.

“I was really impressed on how the media pulled together and worked in harmony to do the celebrity interviews with limited space and adverse weather conditions,” said “H” John Mejia, “Good Life Tampa Bay” TV host.
